City & Guilds 2330 Electrotechnical Training Level 3

This course enables anyone with previous electrical experience to gain the City & Guilds 2330 Level 3 Certificate in electrotechnical technology – crucial proof that you are fully qualified and competent to do the job.

Course Content

This course is the next step for any experienced electrician wishing to improve their qualifications – and the logical progression for anyone who has already gained the City & Guilds 2330 Level 2 or 2360 Part 1 qualifications.

The course covers the following:

- Level 3 Certificate in electrotechnical technology – installation (buildings and structures)
- Theory and practical based training, including an online, multiple-choice exam and two practical assessments

Alternatively, you can use this course to add to the knowledge and understanding you will need in order to go on to take an electrotechnical NVQ.

However you choose to use this course, it's an essential stepping-stone to furthering your career as a fully qualified electrician.

Duration

Intensive 6-week course, held over a 12-week period. To enable you to fit this demanding course into your busy schedule, course sessions are held on a 'two weeks on, two weeks off' basis.

Although designed to cater for people of all ages, the flexibility of the course makes it especially useful for mature students with family, work and other commitments who are unable or unwilling to attend college for the duration of a full academic year.

Prerequisite

To take this course, you will need to have relevant electrical experience. That may be any of the following:

- You may have practical experience from your current or previous job, for example as an electrical maintenance engineer
- You may have the City & Guilds 2330 Level 2 qualification or 2360 Part 1 qualification
- If you are aged 16 to 25, this course can form part of an Modern Electrical Apprenticeship programme that allows you to earn as you learn
